

STONEWALL JACKSON.

[The memory of Stonewall Jackson has received few tributes more touching in simplicity and pathos than the following beautiful poem, published in the New York Citizen, of which Charles G. Halpine is the editor. Mr. Halpine, himself a poet of rare taste, was an officer in the United States army during the late war, and is well known to fame as "Private Miles O'Reilly." The poem in question, he says, is from the pen of a distinguished officer of the United States Navy.]

He sleeps all quietly and cold
Beneath the soil that gave him birth;
Then break his battle-band in twain,
And lay it with him in the earth!

No more at midnight shall he urge
His toilsome march among the pines;
Nor hear upon the morning air
The war shout of his charging lines.

Cold is the eye whose meteor gleam
Flashed hope on all within its light;
And still the voice that, trumpet toned,
Rang through the serried ranks of fight.

No more for him shall cannons park,
Or tents gleam white upon the plain;
And where his camp fires blazed of yore,
Brown reapers laugh amid the grain!

No more above this narrow bed
Shall sound the tread of marching feet,
The rifle volley, and the crash
Of sabres when the foemen meet.

And though the winds of autumn rave,
And winter snows fall thick and deep
Above his breast—they cannot move
The quiet of his dreamless sleep.

We may not raise a marble shaft
Above the heart that now is dust;
But nature, like a mother fond,
Will ne'er forget her sacred trust.

Young April, o'er his lowly mound,
Shall shake the violets from her hair;
And glorious June, with fervid kisses,
Shall bid the roses blossom there.

And round about the droning bee,
With drowsy hum, shall come and go;
While west winds all the livelong day
Shall murmur dirges soft and low.

The warrior's stormy fate is o'er,
The midnight gloom hath passed away;
And like a glory from the East,
Breaks the first light of Freedom's day!

And white winged Peace, o'er all the land,
Broods like a dove upon her nest;
While iron war, with slaughter gorged,
At length hath laid him down to rest.

And where we won our onward way
With fire and steel, through yonder
wood,
The black bird whistles, and the quail
Gives answer to her timid brood.

Yet oft in dreams his fierce brigade
Shall see the form they followed far,
Still leading in the furthest van—
A landmark in the clouds of war!

And oft when white haired grandsires tell
Of bloody struggles past and gone,
The children at their knees will hear
How Jackson led his columns on!

MERCHANTS OF THE SOUTH.

THE UNDERSIGNED, WHOLESALE dealers, advise you of the fact that Charleston is again a market for the purchase of goods, and in view of the early opening of the spring trade, we beg to solicit the resumption of the patronage so liberally extended to this market in the past.

We are aware that many old and respected firms will be missed from our number, but many familiar names will be found in new associations, ready to supply the wants of the Trade, as of yore, and other old and new firms will be added to our number at an early day.

The cash and short credit system having been universally adopted in all the Northern markets, we are necessarily compelled to adopt a like system as the only safe one on which to conduct business, and the heavy percentage once necessary to cover bad debts will now be avoided. Small profits and quick returns will be the rule, and under its working we hope not only to restore to our ancient city her former prosperity, but to extend her trade to the full extent of the capabilities her excellent geographical position and natural advantages afford. Our interest and ambition combine to stimulate us in attaining the result.

The South Carolina Railroad is now open to Columbia, and its President has officially informed us that the Augusta line will be completed to Blackville this month, and that on the first of February he will receive through freight to Augusta. A line of steamers to Savannah will afford facilities for shipping in that direction. It is our purpose to have in store by the last of February a complete and varied assortment of goods in our respective lines adapted to the spring trade, and every exertion shall be made to promote your interests.

We extend to you the hand of commercial fellowship, and solicit your co-operation and patronage in our efforts to make Charleston the centre of Southern trade. Give us the encouragement we ask, and you will enjoy all the advantages of a cheap home market.
